The National Examiner featured "Pussycat Picassos" • claiming that "feline paintings will make you paws" • and calling the book "captivating."

"Pocket-size gift edition of the wildly popular book on feline aesthetics, distilling the best photos and writings from the original large-format book. Includes full-color photos of cats painting. --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

This book should be required reading for all art critics, art history instructors and museum docents. It is hilarious!

The writing is laugh out loud funny, very clever book and the photos are wonderful too. If you're an artist, appreciate art and love cats too, this makes a great coffee table book.

The wife laughed and seems to love the book. That's all I can ask for!

Another book about cats and just the cover makes it eye-catching. I figured if monkeys and elephants could paint, so could cats. I first saw this book in a hardcover edition in a library and immediately checked it out. Lots of art critics' comments and explanations, some of which are hilarious. Are they real or just tongue-in-cheek! Doesn't matter, these cats are interesting. For instance, one of them paints only on the refrigerator.

I have wanted this book for ages. I have the small book that came out at the same time, comprised of post cards with the pictures and the really great reviews. they are so tongue in cheek and funny, that I have looked at it many times when I needed a laugh. This past summer my husband passed on, and I felt I needed a chuckle, so found this on and ordered it. It proves that books like this are always needed, not just the books I get on Kindle, but ones I can have in my living room and enjoy often.

I like this book but it did not arrive in the condition advertised.

Incredible, hilarious, I don't know if this is real or poetic, fable or facts, I just love the story behind each cat-artist explaining where they come from its unique painting style. Worth being in any home. Remember that a house without a cat isn't a home.

I love this! It is very insightful and fun! I think about trying to get my kitty to paint, but when I glance up from the book at her she just gives me a pointed glare that warns she doesn't like to have messy paws. Of course.....she always looks at me like that.
