Joelle Dreidemy has drawn and painted ever since she can remember. After graduating from the prestigious Emile Cohl School she moved to Paris, from where she now illustrates for English, American, French and Korean publishers, as well as teaching at Emile Cohl.

I just bought this book for my nearly 4 year old, who calls it his "thinking book". He adores it and can look at it forever. His visual scanning is helped too by it: he's getting very good at systematically scanning graphics to find differences. He's really into maps right now so the maps at the beginning with the basic legends are wonderful. He loves to talk about them and look at them. Now trying to find out if this is series with more in it!
