Synopsis

How does a woman go from celebrity life style, always in the tabloids, parties and social circles to grabbing visibly mad people on the street, cleaning them up and rehabilitating them? How does a woman go from being self centered to being totally selfless? How did she fight her way out of depression? How did she go from having it all, happily married to becoming a single parent raising four children with no support? How did she open her home to strangers and destitute, feeding them from her table daily? How did she forgive a spouse that confessed to working towards destroying her to gain wealth for himself? How did she as a single parent tidy her home in preparation for death, having been terminally diagnosed of cancer? what legacies can you leave behind? What can you learn from Bimpe's life? Find out all about this as you read the life of Bimpe, her trials and triumphs and how she got through it all. Done It All is a true life story book, part of a series called Women Holding Hands. Showcasing the life of women that are using their trials as stepping stones for others. Busola Omosola Shogbamimu is an author passionate about the empowerment of women in general and particularly widows and single parents. She believes that the home anchors on a woman's ability to keep her husband and children safe and at peace, strengthened in the knowledge that nothing is impossible to one who believes. A co founding director of a charitable organisation -Breakforth, Breakforth supports women empowerment through physical, emotional and life skills training, to maximize their innate potential and be the best in all circumstances.
